

MOD7-MW380-Well Woman Observation and Charting

1. Well woman charting should be tailored to the specific woman's needs, age and circumstances. To best facilitate accurate documentation, the chart is most efficient when the information is categorized in these broad sections, so the smaller details can be documented within or under these headings.
 - a. history-physical assessment, treatment plan and follow up
 - b. subjective-objective-assessment-plans
 - c. history-assessment-vitals of major organs- other vitals
 - d. history-concerns of the woman-follow up plan
2. A previous client with a normal health history is presently having her annual exam. How does her previous documented visit assist both the care provider and the woman's needs?
 - a. The practitioner can orient herself to the client before she arrives, for a more efficient appointment.
 - b. The patient has the opportunity to bring up new health issues with the security that her care provider is aware of her previous health history.
 - c. The chart itself has allowed for a continuous, close relationship.
 - d. a and b only
3. Which of these most accurately assists the care provider in identifying possible risks associated with heredity?
 - a. menstrual history
 - b. gynecological history
 - c. family history
 - d. sexual history
4. Which information is most pertinent in identifying a woman with a high STI risk?
 - a. gynecological history
 - b. sexual history
 - c. contraceptive history
 - d. nutritional history
5. In which situation does a woman achieve a more active role in her own health care?
 - a. The woman is given the chart to read.
 - b. The midwife talks the woman through the exam, asking specific questions pertaining to each system.
 - c. The woman has expressed her concerns and needs, therefore the midwife addresses these first, even if it may make the exam longer.
 - d. Only b and c

6. When the midwife charts the history, the present needs of the client, the physical assessment and the findings, next she agrees with the client upon a:
 - a. birth control method
 - b. follow up plan
 - c. recommended doctor
 - d. nutritional plan

7. A follow up plan might include all of the following, except:
 - a. Calling the client regarding abnormal lab results
 - b. Having the client come back in to discuss abnormal lab results
 - c. Referring the client to a physician
 - d. Calling a client to see if she has complied with a calcium recommendation

8. A woman should always leave the office with some plan tailored to her specific needs.
 - a. true
 - b. false

9. Chart and discuss all findings of abuse except:
 - a. signs of bruising
 - b. woman's fear of her partner
 - c. a woman who reports that her partner enjoys pornography
 - d. a woman with a restraining order

10. Charting of suspected domestic violence should be clear, concise and objective.
 - a. true
 - b. false